

The piece “Untitled (Nature does not calculate)” by Matthias Planitzer is an edition of digital prints, where each piece is a unique variety.

It consists of a collection of unequal circles distributed in such a way that they form a close to ideal arrangement with regard to a high packing density while their size conforms to an underlying distribution. Such behaviour can be frequently observed in nature, e.g. in biological tissue, foam, honeycombs or sand piles.

This catalogue contains images based on digital renderings. While the shapes are true to the prints, the colour is an approximation to the warm white colour of the paper. If you see any moiré effects (e.g. as patches of black), please resize this document to full resolution. Any such effects are not present in the prints but due to scaling on the screen.
